

WILL TEST THE LAW

Local Option Is Again Attacked in the Supreme Court
MAY WEBSTER BACK TO JAIL

To Remain There Until She Is Needed in the Prince Michael Case—News of the State.

LANSING, May 3.—Nearly the entire day in the supreme court was occupied in disposing of motions, and none of the cases upon the calendar were reached. The most important matters were applications for mandamus, which will test the validity of the Miner election law and the election in Eaton county under the local option law, by which the county was "dry," and a hearing under a habeas corpus proceeding, in which the sister of May Webster, a witness detained in the notorious "Prince" Michael or "Flying roll" case in Detroit made application for her release upon the ground that she was detained against her will and desired a release. The assistant prosecuting attorney of Wayne county read an affidavit from the witness, who was present in court, to the effect that she was not detained against her wish. The court took a recess and examined the affidavit in chambers, and she still adhering to the opinion expressed in her affidavit, was remanded back to the county jail. The sister, so solicited for her release, is one of the wives of the "Prince."

The local option election in Eaton county is contested upon the ground that the affidavits attached to the petitions to the board of supervisors failed to show that the parties making them were residents of the township, and that there was no transcript of the poll list accompanying the petition; that the petitions from the wards of the city of Charlotte contained the names of persons not residents and voters in the wards; that the voting in Onondaga township was all done in one district, when it should have been in two; that the supervisors in some of the townships circulated the petitions themselves, and a general attack upon the constitutionality of the law on general principles.

It is conceded that the voting in Onondaga was all done in one district, but it is charged, but that it did not affect the result, and the township might be even thrown out without affecting it; that there is nothing in the law preventing supervisors from circulating the petitions, as they are not benefited personally and it is not against public policy that the parties making the affidavits signed the petitions and therein stated they were residents of the township; that the transcripts of poll lists were filed, for the record of the supervisors' meeting shows them to have been signed; also, that any irregularities in the petitions cannot be reviewed by the supreme court, as the law makes the action of the supervisors final.

Wednesday's call—77, 79, 82, and 84 cases.

The following Grand Rapids attorneys were in attendance at court: L. D. Norris, Albert Crane, McGeorge Bundy, W. D. Fuller, W. W. Hyde.

THE MINER BILL.
Presidential Electors Take Steps to Test Its Validity.

LANSING, May 3.—The presidential electors nominated upon the state ticket, fourteen in number, took the first step today to test the validity of the Miner election law. Application was made by Col. H. M. Duffield, their counsel for a mandamus compelling the secretary of state between the dates of July 1 and September 1 next to notify each elector each county that at the next general election electors for president and vice president will be chosen. The court granted an order to show cause returnable on Thursday, May 12 at 2 p. m., when arguments upon the motion and application will be heard. Whatever the action of the court, it will undoubtedly go to the United States supreme court, and this early action gives ample time for adjudication before the election.

FISHERMAN DROWNED.
William Kline Swept Under the Current at Big Rapids.

BIG RAPIDS, May 3.—While fishing below the dam last night, William Kline fell into the river and was drowned. His body has not been recovered. He leaves a wife and family.

MUST PAY TAXES.
LANSING, May 3.—The state railway commission board gave a hearing today to General Counsel W. C. Goudy of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company upon the question of taxation under the new law. The company filed a supplemental report with the commissioner of railroads, including in their earnings statement their entire mileage instead of that of the main line as under the old law, thereby reducing the amount some $270,000 apportioned to Michigan, and the amount of taxes to the state about $15,000. The company claimed the new law to be unconstitutional, as it gives the crossing board judicial authority, and that it designates no person in particular to represent the state. The board held that the power conferred upon the board in that of all other assessment boards, and that under the general law the railroad commissioner is the representative of the state, and that the road must be assessed and pay taxes upon the same basis as heretofore.

Cut Down Their Salaries.
SAGINAW, May 3.—The salaries of the city officials were nearly all cut down at last night's session of the council. The biggest cut was on the city clerk, whose compensation was reduced from $2000 to $1400. The assessor was cut from $1500 to $1200, the comptroller from $2000 to $1800. The city clerk's expenses, however, amount to about $400. It goes into immediate effect.

Railroad Man Killed.
ANDREW, May 3.—At 9 o'clock last night during a thunder storm, D. J. Barton, a brakeman on train No. 69 on the Lake Shore, going west, took shelter on the engine. He was leaning out of the gangway while near Dover, to see if his "markers" were all right, when he was struck by the span of a bridge and killed. He was 30 years old and unmarried and had lived in Toledo.

May White, a Detroit woman 24 years old, took a big dose of morphine, in a secluded part of Belle Isle park. A policeman happened along just in time to save her life. Poverty brought about by the riotous living of her father, who was once a man of wealth, prompted the act.

Big John, who lives down the river from Lachine, came up to the village to see if any one had come up from Montreal to accompany him. He found two young men, other strangers to him and to each other. One, George Wait, was from Montreal, while the other, Frederick Goyer, came from "back country."

The men walked down to Big John's house, a distance of three miles. Here they launched their boat, and the party was increased by one more, Big John's son Murray. It took only half an hour to work out through the ice and heavy water to reach the top of the rapids. As the boat approached them Big John stood up in the stern with his long paddle in his hand ready for the shot. Rocks glistened on all sides with their icy coats; huge waves dashed high, leaped over the frail boat and threatened to swamp her. Goyer was kept busy bailing out with Wait, while Murray obeyed the commands of his father. Goyer describes the passage as follows:

"From the time we struck the rapids until we reached the lower end of them, John seemed a being inspired. His eyes were fairly glistening and shooting fire. I thought they would leap from their sockets with the tremendous excitement. His long, thin paddle would sweep the air like a flash and be buried in the foaming water, swinging the boat hither and thither, avoiding this jutting rock and then that one. A continuous stream of commands in French flowed from his lips to his son Murray, who was nearly the equal of his father in dexterity. Now and then he directed me in broken English to do something. He was a picture that no artist would ever forget, and that would haunt him until he had reproduced it on canvas."

The trip was one of excitement and peril from beginning to end, the boat passing from one rapid to another in succession. It filled continually with water and kept Wait and Goyer busy bailing. When they reached the whirlpool, the last and most dangerous spot, Big John gave his final command, and it came near also being his last on earth.

He shouted to Murray, the boy, to paddle hard, and as the lad shifted his position to take a longer and stronger stroke he lost his balance and fell over on his back in the bottom of the boat. The mighty Indian, quick as a wink, threw himself down flat in the boat, and thus saved it from being capsized, the heavy waves throwing twenty buckets of water all over the party. Big John was up again in a second, and with two or three powerful strokes he spun the boat around and sent her nose straight into the waves again.

The whole incident did not occupy more than six seconds, and then the boat shot down into the home channel in a few seconds more. Big John threw his paddle into the bottom of the boat, and almost exhausted from the violent exertion and excitement, sank down into the stern sheets. All danger was passed, but he fully realized what a close shave the party had had as he pointed back at the whirlpool and said, "Je croyais qu'on allait au ciel tout rond." Which was translated, "I thought we were going to heaven, boat and all."

The boat was pulled out at Jacques Cartier's landing by willing hands. Big John gave Goyer his paddle as a reminder of the trip, and announced that that was the last time he would ever shoot the Lachine rapids in winter.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

An Ancient Relic.
A novel and very interesting relic of the days when the Indians held undisputed sway in this part of the country has been found near Couperville, Washington. It is the head of some instrument, probably a war club, and is formed from what appears to be a walrus tusk, the point of which is broken off. It is about ten inches long, and in the center is a hole a trifle less than an inch square, evidently intended for the reception of a handle. As walrus are not now found in the sound, the weapon probably belonged to some of the far northern tribes, and was dropped during one of their frequent predatory excursions in this vicinity.—Portland Oregonian.

Cost of Lighting the House of Commons.
While the electric light has been applied in the house of commons at annual cost estimated for the coming year at £1,000, the gas bill increases rather than diminishes. Last year it cost £2,000; for the coming year it is believed it will not be less than £2,300. There is some slight reduction on the bill for oil lamps, which before the introduction of the electric light used regularly to amount to £2,000 a season. Last year this charge was reduced to £1,800, and it is hoped that in the coming year the amount will not exceed £1,500.—London Tit-Bits.

It Never Languiques.
The force in Comptroller Colgan's office in Sacramento is wrestling with the coyote scalp claims again. Other industries may languish and die, but this one seems to grow in vigor with age. County clerks have sent in claims for nine months, which show that 20,299 scalps have been taken during that period, which will pull $101,493 from the state treasury. The southern counties especially are reaping a harvest in this direction.—San Francisco Chronicle.

How to Feed Dogs.
Dr. Gordon Stables is well known throughout Great Britain as an authority on dogs and a persistent and consistent friend of these four footed friends of man. In the last volume of "The Dog Owners' Annual" he says: "In the matter of food many dog owners make grievous errors and are therefore remiss in their duty toward our friend the dog. I think the rule of a light breakfast about 8 in the morning, and a good nutritious dinner at 5 p. m., is a good one, but we should never neglect to give some mashed greens twice or thrice a week, nor forget that change does good. An occasional dinner of well boiled tripe is a great treat to almost any dog; so is a bit of liver lightly boiled. As to bones, young dogs may have safe ones, but old dogs are better without a handful of bonemeal must do duty instead."

Some Shoes, Surely.
An idea may be formed of the growth of manufacturing in the United States by an examination of the statistics of the boot and shoe business. Twenty years ago New England factories produced 100 per cent of the footwear made in America. The New England product has largely increased, yet it is now but 50 per cent of the total value, the industrial having been established in other parts of the Union. Since 1870 imports of shoes and skins have increased about 45 per cent. During the same period exports of manufactures of leather have increased more than 130 per cent.

Dainty and Useful.
The jannet conceit that has appeared in a very long time is this attractive basket, for long after the sweet burden has gone it proves a dainty receptacle for delicate fancy work in the drawing room or boudoir. The model is constructed of a small leghorn hat, not a very fine quality, costing less than half a dollar; a half yard of crepe silk, at thirty-nine cents a yard, to be had at all the stores; four yards of ribbon an inch wide, the same shade as the silk, the model being in fresh pink, satin or brocade at choice; and a handful of beautiful carnations, to be purchased for very little, as it is a showy, handsome flower, and a bit of heavy bonnet wire to form the handle. Roll the brim and tuck it firmly in place with needle and heavy linen thread; then twist the ribbon around the wire for the handle, inserting sprays of carnations in the twists toward the lower part of the right side of the handle.

When entirely covered the desired length, bend the wire into loops at the ends, which will make it far easier to fasten in place inside the crown of the hat, as a handle. The bag is next fashioned by sewing two strips of the silk together, running a gathering thread in the lower side, and a casing surmounted by a ruffle at the top. It must be sewed firmly and neatly inside the hat, just as a hat lining is put in, after the placing of the band. The inside of this dainty silken pocket may be entirely lined with white silk, or the crown of the hat may be lined with tinfoil, and the silk pocket above left light and airy.

Ribbons are to be drawn through at the top casing, and dainty butterfly ruche bows set upon the handle just above the carnations and also on the brim of the hat. A bunch of carnations is then drawn through the roll of the brim and this fairy basket is complete. Another less complicated tiny basket for bonbons or trifles is made of a very delicate, cheap little white straw basket, lined inside with a bit of bright silk furred over a tiny pad of cotton-batting sachet, and finished in a tiny ruffle at the edge. The handle is wound with daisy ribbon the color of the silk and garnished with a minute butterfly bow at the top. A tiny band of maroon feathers covers the outside in the same shade as the silk and ribbon, or fur may be used with a tiny knot of gay flowers tucked in its long hairs at one side and peeping over into the basket.

These lovely baskets are very available in using up old material. A last summer's hat freshened at the cleaner's (an inexpensive cleaner), or even wet thoroughly and pressed carefully with forget-me-nots, violets, buttercups, orchids, with fresh silk and ribbons to match, and you have a confection that will delight the eye, while the tiny basket will use up all the small bits left over from winter gowns. As favors for luncheon parties or June lawn parties nothing could be more appropriate than a hat full of flowers. The happy recipient will note well the added loveliness to her crisp summer gown when she adjusts her well worn prize upon her rounded arm.

FLORENCE TING BILLS.
If people would only mind their own business what a lovely world it would be! If we attend strictly to our own manners and morals, letting other people alone, we do well. If we keep our "own selves" perfectly straight at all times, it is better than most people do.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC is a distinctive remedy, and is totally unlike any of the other blood medicines which are sold. It cures diseases of the blood and skin by removing the poison germs which cause them, and at the same time supplies good blood and tissue for the wasted parts. It is the only blood purifier which is said to be just as good, for it is not true. No medicine.
